

Predicts the amount of energy that a building requires from the central heating network, using historical data and machine learning.